IS BEDFORD TO HAVE A BASEBALL CLUB

At the present time the management of the Bedford Baseball Team is a very discouraged lot, the attendance at the last several games having been unusually small, the gate not coming near to defraying the expenses of the visiting club; in fact, there never have been but two games, (Decoration Day and the Fourth of July) that the receipts were over and above the expenses. The team on the field that will give the high class games of ball that our club has this season—having played 10 games; winning 7, losing 2, and tying one; this record alone speaks for itself, and the boys and management deserves the support of the fans of the community.

It is up to YOU, if we are to have a Ball Field and Club—they need YOUR support, YOUR presence at the next game, this Friday evening. The strong Ellerslie team will play at Northside Park and the manager of the visiting club has promised to have his team on the grounds at 4:30 o'clock, game to start PROMPTLY AT 5 P. M. If you have an ounce of Sportmanship in you, arrange to be there and enjoy a good game of the National pastime. What would Bedford be without a Ball team? It is up to YOU!

REPORT OF MEETING OF FEDERATION OF WOMEN

The Bedford County Federation of Women's Clubs held an interesting meeting at Hopewell, on Saturday, July 28th, which was well attended notwithstanding the inclement weather.

The Club endorsed the work the W. C. T. U. is doing in the interests of State Law Enforcement; it voted to contribute $25.00 to the funds being collected to make up the deficit in the State Appropriation, and it also endorsed the movement for the furtherance of peace and the settlement of international disputes by arbitration rather than by war. It was decided that the Club express approval of the movement by sending telegrams to President Harding and to our United States Senator.

The next meeting of the Club will be held at Saxton, October 27th.

About one hundred and fifty more to be put in and a four inch meter line is now being laid up Juliana Heights to accommodate the growing demands replacing two inch lines.

REPORT OF COMMUNITY PICNIC

Bedford's Community Picnic which was held last Thursday at Hersberger's Grove near Cessna, under the auspices of the Bedford Chamber of Commerce, was a great success. The grounds were especially adapted for such an occasion and furnished ample room to rail the sports of the day. The Chamber of Commerce had placed numerous swings about the grove and they also provided horse-shoes. Games were in full progress during the whole day.

The afternoon was devoted to fulfilling the athletic program. Events for ladies and men were provided. There were also special events of various kinds. The bathing beach did a rushing business the whole day, especially during the afternoon. The baseball game between the married men and the single men resulted in a victory for the former. ROBBERY IN SOMERSET

Lewis Engleka of Allegheny township, Somerset County, was accosted by robbers and was forced to tell where his money was. These three desperadoes knew that Engleka had previous sold timber for $10,000 and no doubt thought that the old man, who was 80 years kept it in the house. The three overpowered Engleka tied a rope around his neck and threw it over a beam in the barn and drew him up, then let him down and ask him to tell where his money was. He told them that he did not have any on his person but that nearly all of his money was deposited in the bank. This they did not believe so they pulled him off his feet again. When they released him the second time he told them of $8 or $10 which he had in the house but still they did not believe him so they raised him again, this time came nearly strangling him to death but he insisted that the few dollars he had in the house was all that he had around. Then they tied his hands and tied him up to a post and ransacked the house from top to bottom and got the money he told them was there but forgot to search his pockets which contained about $30. The robbers have not been apprehended as yet but when captured they should be put through the same course of sprouts or the same torture they applied to the old man.

DOLLINGS MEN MEET AT COLUMBUS

Philadelphia, Aug. 1.—The joint meeting of the receivers of the R. L. Dollings companies will be held in Columbus, O., some time during the latter part of the week. Thomas Raeburn White, receiver for the Pennsylvania company, will leave for the Ohio city late tonight.

An earlier meeting of the receivers had been planned, but Mr. White sent notices to the other receivers that he would be unable for several days to gather enough information of value to warrant the trip to Columbus.

Bert McBride Indianapolis banker and receiver for the Indiana Dollings company, has notified the Ohio receiver that he is ready for the conference any time.

Mr. White said there would be no statements until after the conference.

Directors who did not direct constituted the governor board of the R. L. Dollings company of Pennsylvania, investment brokers, now in the hands of a receiver together with two subsidiary companies, the American Bronze company of Berwyn, and the McCambridge company of Philadelphia.

That was admitted yesterday by three of the directors of the Dollings company in this city, George D. Porter, former director of public safety, who until March 15 was second vice president and treasurer; Monte Leakey, who succeeded Porter, and L. P. Schumacker, president of the American Cone and Pretzel company, who was a director in the Dollings company.

The last meeting of the board of directors was held in April, despite the usual provision in the by-laws that meetings should be held once a month, and despite conditions which have since been revealed as unsuitable.

For some reason not yet explained, the minute books of the Pennsylvania company are in Columbus, O., headquarters of the Dollings companies of Pennsylvania and Indiana and their many subsidiaries. Fourteen corporations, including the Ohio parent company, are now in receivership.

Porter said yesterday that although he was president at one time of both the McCambridge company and the American bronze company, he was at the head of these firms in name only.

"Orders came from Columbus," he said, "and I carried them out. I visited the plants occasionally, but for the most part I was engaged in the sale of stock. The service department of the Dollings company, made up of engineers and experts in Columbus, directed operations of the plant."

Mr. Schumacker said yesterday he did not remember having met any of the directors except Benham, Harris and Porter. He said he did not remember attending any meetings at which business was transacted.

He asserted he had been asked to serve as director at the time of the organization of the Dollings company of Pennsylvania 1920 but that six months later he sent a letter asking to withdraw, but this and succeeding missives were disregarded. Mr. Schumacker said he was not certain whether he had attended a meeting in April.

"If I was there the minutes will show it," he said.

Francis Rawle, counsel for Robert O. Sperry, receiver for the American Bronze company, said the directors of that corporation did not hold a regular meeting for one period of more than two years, from February, 1921, until June, 1923.

That stockholders in the Dollings company of Pennsylvania, mostly small investors, are concerned over the present condition of affairs was indicated, Mr. Rawle said, by many letters which have been received. Most of these are queries regarding dividends, payment of which is held up under the receiverships.

100 REPUBLICANS IN RING

Somerset county has more than 100 candidates for nomination at the Republican primaries in September. Thirty of them aspire to the office of sheriff and 12 want to be county commissioners.

PRESIDENT HARDING SERIOUSLY BUT NOT CRITICALLY ILL

President Harding, who was attacked with ptomaine poisoning and later by congestion of the lung, has reached a very favorable stage and is considered out of danger. So far as the immediate effects of the poisoning is concerned as well as the affection of the lung. The chief cause now for anxiety is that other complications may manifest themselves. The President at one time early in life having suffered from pneumonia in the same lung.

What the President needs greatest now is a complete rest and careful nursing and medical attention. He has had a restful sleep for a couple of nights and his pulse and temperature have decreased while his respiration has come down to almost the normal rate. All conditions are favorable at present for his immediate recovery. His attendants are not planning any removal from his present quarters at Palace Hotel, San Francisco immediately. There is likelihood of removing him to a country home for complete rest but his physicians are not satisfied to do that just now because they fear that the removal may disturb his pulse and his excitement may cause a reaction.

Ex-President Wilson, has sent his sympathy and expressed the hope that the President would speedily recover. William J. Bryan, United States Senator Underwood, United States Senator Reed, of Missouri, and a host of other prominent men of opposite political faith and antagonistic political views have sent messages of sympathy and expressions of an early recovery.

BALL PLAYER DIES

Michael Donahoe Succumbs to Fractured Skull Received in Game

Michael Donahoe of Broad Top City, well known Broad Top region ball player, died at the Nason hospital at Roaring Spring last Thursday morning at 12:10 o'clock, death resulting from a fracture of the skull.

Donahoe was playing third base for the Robertsdale team in a game on Monday afternoon with the Coal-dale team on the grounds at Coal-dale. He was first to the bat and the first ball thrown by the Coal-dale pitcher hit Donahoe on the left temple.

The injured man was given first aid and was then taken to a local physician. It was not thought he was seriously injured and he went to his home. Monday night Donahoe lapsed into unconsciousness and was brought to the Nason hospital on Tuesday. An examination revealed a fracture of the skull over the left eye and temple.

Donahoe had been away from home playing ball and had returned home on a visit when he received the fatal hit. He is married and resided with his family at Broad Top City.

Mr. Donahoe was the son of William and Mrs. Ella Lucy Donahoe and was born at Robertsdale on July 3, 1897. He is survived by his parents, his wife and two small children. The body was taken to his home for burial.

DEPUTIES ARE NAMED FOR VACCINATION WORK THROUGHOUT BEDFORD COUNTY

Dr. Wilmet Ayres, County Medical Director, has been notified by the State Secretary of Health, Dr. Charles H. Miner, that the following County Physicians have been appointed as official Deputies to revaccinate free of charge, school children who have undergone two or more unsuccessful attempts at vaccination against smallpox. The appointees are:

Dr. A. M. Miller, Hyndman
Dr. H. I. Shoenthal, New Paris
Dr. J. E. Miller, Osterburg
Dr. W. E. Nycum, Everett
Dr. F. S. Campbell, Hopewell
Dr. A. Z. Stoner, Cumberland Valley

School children living in the rural districts who have been twice unsuccessfully vaccinated, or those who had been admitted to school last term on an official temporary certificate must be revaccinated by the County Medical Director, or one of these official Deputies, who will grant the temporary certificate which will admit them to school for the current school year. In cities, Boroughs, or Townships of the first class having organized Boards of Health, this official revaccination must be performed by the Board of Health Physician.

Teachers or school Principals are not allowed to admit children to school unless they present, or have already filed a certificate of successful vaccination, or in the case of unsuccessful results the official temporary certificate, which must have been issued since June 1st, at which time temporary certificates issued during the previous school term became void.

The County Medical Director has pointed out the fact that school teachers must be careful in demanding proper vaccination certificates. A certificate stating that a child has been vaccinated is not sufficient. The vaccination Physician must certify that an examination of the child made not less than eight days after vaccination disclosed a vaccination scar or cicatrix indicating a successful vaccination. If this vaccination cicatrix is not in evidence, the Physician cannot legally certify, and the child must be revaccinated.

The Supreme Court in Lee vs. March 243 Pennsylvania, Page 351, has ruled that it is obligatory to use the vaccination certificate forms prescribed by the State Department of Health. These forms are furnished free of charge to all Physicians practicing in the second class townships, and any other form cannot legally be accepted by the teacher or Principal.

Citing the Law, it is also explained that teachers may not accept certificates issued by the family Physician or School Medical Inspector exempting pupils from vaccination because of an alleged physical disability. Cases of actual physical disability far vaccination are rare. Generally speaking, any child that is well enough to go to school is a fit subject for vaccination. If physical disability is claimed, such cases must be passed upon by the County Medical Director or one of the officials above named.

School Medical Inspectors are directed by the Secretary of Health to verify the existence of the required vaccination cicatrix and pass upon the validity of vaccination certificates filed.

LESSON FOR AUGUST 5
MARY MAGDALENE

LESSON TEXT—Luke 8:1-3; John 9:38; 20:11-18
GOLDEN TEXT—"Our soul waiteth for the Lord. He is our help and shield."—Psalm 33:21
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Mark 15:40-16:8, Luke 23:49-24:12
PRIMARY TOPIC—How Mary Magdalene Showed Her Love for Jesus
JUNIOR TOPIC—How Mary Magdalene Showed Her Gratitude to Jesus
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Woman's Grateful Service
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Mary Magdalene, Saved and Serving

I. Mary Saved (Luke 8:1, 2).
While Jesus and His disciples were preaching throughout the villages of Galilee, Mary and certain other women heard the good news of salvation and were saved. Evil spirits were cast out of them. Mary had been possessed with seven demons. The number seven indicates the completeness of her affliction. Bodily affliction usually accompanied demon possession. Doctor Erdman says: "It is a cruel error to confuse Mary Magdalene with the sinful woman of whom Luke has just been writing. Mary had suffered from demon possession, as here stated, but there is nothing in the gospels to indicate that she had ever been a woman of notoriously evil life." So widespread is this false impression that many rescue homes for fallen women are named unjustly, "Magdalene."

II. Mary Ministering (Luke 8:3).
She, with certain women who had been saved from Satan's power, out of a heart of gratitude looked after the comfort of the Lord and His disciples. These women must have been in easy circumstances, as they were able to buy food and other necessities and, doubtless, lodging for Jesus and His disciples. These women were the forerunners of that large company of saved women who have throughout the Christian centuries been ministering to the Lord through kindness to His ministers. How poor would be this world without the ministry of godly women!

III. Mary's Steadfastness (John 19:25).
After the men and disciples had forsaken the Lord a group of faithful women remained at the cross, among whom was Mary Magdalene. Others lingered, prompted by natural affection, but she lingered out of grateful love for salvation from Satan's bondage.

IV. Mary at the Empty Tomb (John 20:11-18).
1. Mistaken Tears (11-13). She had come to the tomb to weep and to pay respect to the body of her Lord. She was weeping over what she regarded as a tragic loss. In spite of her love and faith, she was in a state of confusion. If she had known what was revealed to her a short time afterward, she would not have thus wept. She was weeping because the tomb was empty, when the real cause for weeping would have been the Lord's body in the tomb. How many times we break our hearts over misunderstanding. The fact that a living body had walked out of the tomb instead of the dead body in it should have occasioned rejoicing. The empty tomb is the Christian's ground for hope.

2. The Unrecognized Master (vv. 14, 15).
She was within sight of the living Lord, yet mourning for Him. Let us look in the right direction and we shall have our sorrows turned into joys. The reason she did not recognize the Lord was that He did not appear as she thought He should. Many times our preconceived notions prevent us from seeing Jesus.

3. Restrained Familiarity (vv. 16, 17).
The full meaning of Jesus' words when he forbade Mary to touch Him perhaps we cannot surely know. The difficulty doubtless inhered in Mary's misunderstanding. She seemed to think that the same relations instituted before the resurrection could be resumed. He showed her that He was ascending into glory and that He should henceforth receive divine worship.

4. Mary Telling the Good News of the Resurrection (vv. 17, 18).
The need of telling the good news to the poor despondent disciples was so urgent that there was no time for familiarity. What joy there must have been in the hearts of the disciples at this good news.

Riches.
If thou art rich thou art poor; for, like an ass, whose back with ingots bows, thou hearest thy heavy riches but a journey, and death unloads thee.—Shakespeare.

Communism.
Communism possesses a language which every people can understand. Its elements are hunger, envy and death.—Heine

Humility.
Humility is a virtue all preach, none practice; and yet everybody is content to hear.—Selden.

The Idler.
An idler is a watch that ticks both hands, as useless if it goes as if it stands.—Cower.

JOSEPH C. LINCOLN, AMERICAN HUMORIST

It was some years ago that I first saw Joseph C. Lincoln. I did not meet him then, because at that time I was "small fry" on one of the leading magazines and had the pleasure only of catching glimpses of the big authors who came to see, the fiction editor, Mr. Lincoln wasn't quite so big then as he is now, but the direction in which he was headed was more than evident. Joseph C. Lincoln was born on Cape Cod and started his career at an early age as an artist, but shortly discovered that his talents lay in the direction of writing. Among his first writings are his famous "Cape Cod Ballads." They not only were a success when they appeared, but the book has gained in popularity enormously throughout the years. He has sold stories, short and long, to all the prominent magazines in the country, and he has reached a very special place in the hearts of his admirers. He has the faculty not only of entertaining his readers, of putting the laugh in the kind place, but for subtle understanding of human nature and of people. It is this quality that makes him just plain "Joe Lincoln" to hundreds of thousands of his enthusiastic American friends.

MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

Mrs. Lurella Ellis took the cranberry pie from the oven and set it on the back of the stove. It was a successful pie, if she said it as shouldn't; crisp, flaky brown crust; crimson, juicy filling; a very good pie indeed. But, good as it was, it was not too good for Obed. Nothing was too good for a husband like Obed Ellis.

They had been married a month. She had come from Cape Ann to Cape Cod to act as housekeeper and companion for old Mrs. Bailey at Trumet. On the first of September she had taken a day's holiday and, in common with at least one-half of Trumet's population, excursioned to the country fair at Ostabate. There, lonely in all the great crowd, she had stopped before the booth where one might, for the small sum of five cents, toss three rings at a rack of pegs. These pegs were numbered. If you were fortunate enough—or skillful enough—to ring a peg, one received a prize. The prizes were more or less valuable—principally less. A red-faced person with pink and white shirt sleeves made strenuous announcement.

"Here 'g' are, ladies and gents!" he bawled. "Here 'g' are! Toss 'em in and ring 'em out. A genuine guaranteed prize for each and every ringer. Look at 'em, ladies and gents, look at 'em! Australian solid nickel-silver scarf pins! Genuine New Jersey ivory napkin holders! Alaska diamond-studded hair combs for the ladies! Three chances for a nickel, half a dime, five cents! Toss 'em in and ring 'em out!"

Lurella noticed that while many tossed them in, but few succeeded in ringing them out. Then a newcomer laid down a nickel and prepared to try his luck. He was, she thought, a striking looking man, thick set, broad-shouldered, sunburned, wearing a blue uniform with brass buttons and a blue yachting cap. Like her, and therefore unlike the majority of the people on the fair grounds, he seemed to be quite alone. She had been on the point of moving on; now she stayed to watch him make the trial.

Two rings he tossed and each shot, although close, was a miss. The third, however, fairly encircled a peg. The red-faced person lifted both pink and white shirt sleeves in the air. "Look at that!" he bellowed. "Look at it! The gent rings number thirty-two, winnin' the genuine Alaska studded diamond lady's hair comb. He lays down five cents and he takes away a hundred dollars—more or less. There you are, sir! There's the genuine Alaska. Shall I hand it to you or will your wife put it on now and give the congregation a treat?"

Lurella was standing beside the winner of the prize. The red-faced person was dramatically offering her the comb. She blushed furiously. The lookers-on, divining the mistake, cheered and laughed. She hurried away. A moment later she felt a touch on her elbow. The broad-shouldered man in the blue uniform had followed her. His embarrassment seemed to be as great as hers.

"Ma'am," he stammered, "I—I wish you'd take it. I—I'd like you to have it first rate. I'm all alone and—and it ain't a bit of use to me, honest."

She drew herself up. Lurella was nothing if not proper. She had never flirted in all the thirty-five years of her life. Having read a great deal, she knew exactly what and how to reply.

"Sir," she exclaimed. "Comm'n," said the man removing the yachting cap. "I wish you would take it. That—that feller was a fool and if you say so I'll punch his nose. Shall I?"

She was, momentarily, startled out of her propriety. "Oh, no!" she exclaimed. "I will if you say so. He's a smart alack and he'd ought to be licked. But—but, honest, I do wish you'd take this thing. 'Twould look nice on you and—and I ain't got nobody of my own to give it to. I'm a stranger here. Won't you take it, please? I—I don't mean it fresh nor nothin'."

Lurella looked at him. He was about her age, or a little older. He had an honest face, if she ever saw one. He was blushing and did not at all resemble the bold, bad lady-killers of whom she had read in her favorite romances.

She hesitated. Then . . . well, then her own romance began. Before she returned to Trumet that evening she had learned much concerning the man in the blue uniform. His name was Obed Ellis. He was a bachelor, had been to sea in his younger days, had since worked hard at various employments on shore, and was now acting as watchman and caretaker in charge of the property of the big hotel at Orham. During the summer he was in command of the hotel pier and boats, but now, as the season was over, had more leisure. His wages, he informed her with satisfaction, "went on just the same, summer or winter." He was a Methodist, a Republican, and his life was insured for two thousand dollars. He was alone in the world, just as she was.

Together they inspected the poultry and live stock exhibits. He treated her to salt-water taffy, ice cream soda and a "shore dinner" in the refreshment tent. They saw the trotting races and the balloon ascension. Before bidding her good-by at the railroad station, he informed her that he owned an automobile, and, if she "hadn't no objection" he would kind of like to drive over one of these days and take her to ride.

The following Saturday afternoon he did drive over. The ride was delightful; the little car rattled and "skipped" but kept going. A week later he came again, and twice during the week following. A month later he proposed marriage. It was then that she told him of her other love affair. When she was eighteen she had been engaged to a man who kept a billiard saloon at Pigeon Cove. Later she broke the engagement.

"I found out," she said with a shudder, "that he was dissipated. He never told me, but once I saw him drunk—intoxicated, I mean. He had been drinkin' whisky then, but when he couldn't get that he drank Jamaica ginger. He'd been arrested and in the lock-up two or three times. If he'd told me I might have forgiven him; I was a girl and I probably should have forgiven him and been sorry afterwards. But he'd never told me and I couldn't forgive that. That's why I'm telling you this now, Obed. The time to tell such things is before marriage, not afterwards. There mustn't be secrets between husband and wife. I've read too many stories in books about folks with a past gettin' married, and nothin' but misery ever came of it. If you've got anything in your past life now is the time to tell me of it, Obed."

"Sure thing!" agreed Obed, promptly. "What do you say, Lurella? Will you marry me?" She said yes, and, six weeks later they were married and she came to Orham to live with him in the little cottage at the rear of the hotel property. Now, a very happy wife, she was making him a cranberry pie because he liked it better than any other kind.

The pie baked, and the table in the dining room set for dinner, she stepped to the kitchen door to see if he was in sight. He was not but someone else was, a disreputable male, who was sauntering toward her across the back yard. His clothes, his hat, his unshaven face, classified him in her judgment as a tramp. She was not afraid of tramps and asked him what he wanted.

"Ma'am," he said, "does anybody name of Ellis live here?" "Mr. Obed Ellis lives here," she replied; "but he's out. I'm Mrs. Ellis." The tramp nodded. "They told me this was his hang-out," he observed. "I thought I'd just stop in and see him. So you're his wife, eh? I didn't know he was married."

"Come in and sit down," she said. He came into the spotless kitchen and sat down upon one of her freshly scrubbed chairs. He looked about the room, crossed his dingy, ragged-trousered legs, and sniffed.

"Say," he observed, cheerfully, "that pie over there smells good to me." She did not take the hint. "I can give you some cold meat and bread and butter," she said, coldly. "Will that do?"

He grinned. "And a slab of that pie, eh?" he queried. "I should say not! That pie is for my husband. If the meat and bread and a cup of tea won't satisfy you, then—"

"Oh, they'll satisfy me all right, if there's enough of 'em. Just watch what I do to 'em. 'Trot 'em out." She filled a plate and put it and the cup of tea on the kitchen table. "So you used to know Mr. Ellis?" she observed. "What is your name?"

He grinned again, as well as one can grin with a mouth full. "My name is Dugan," he said; "Mike Dugan, but they don't generally call me that. Got any more tea?"

She refilled the cup. "Where did you and my husband know each other?" she asked. "Oh, over in the pen—the jail, I mean." The teapot did not fall from her hand, but it came very near it.

"The jail!" she exclaimed. "Why—why, what jail?" "The Ostabate jail, of course. There ain't no other in these diggin's. Obed and me were in there at the same time." "When was this?" she asked. "Eh? Oh, I dunno. Four years ago, maybe. How about comin' across with the butter?"

She put the butter-plate beside him. "You and—and my husband were in—in the jail together four years ago?" she asked. "Sure, Mike!" "What—why was he there?" "Eh? Oh, same thing that gets 'em all. Needed the coin, I guess. Didn't he never tell you?"

She wanted to cry, but instead she tried to laugh. "Was—was you in there for—for stealin'?" "Me? Not on your life! Rum was my ruin, same as it's been a whole lot of others. Eh? Haw, haw!" "How long was—was Mr. Ellis there?"

"I dunno. Year or so, maybe. I ain't seen him since. He got his discharge a week afore they let me loose." A familiar step sounded on the walk by the side door. Lurella started. "You—you stay right here," she commanded. "Don't you go away. And don't you speak or—or move. My husband is comin'. We—we'll surprise him."

She hurried into the dining room, closing the kitchen door behind her. The familiar step came nearer. The side door, that from the walk to the dining room, opened. Obed came in. "Ship ahoy, old lady!" he hailed, jovially. "Dinner ready? Ain't late, I hope, am I? Why, what's the matter?"

She faced him, white and trembling, but firm. "Obed," she said, "sit down. Dinner'll be ready in a minute. Sit down. I want to—to speak to you about somethin'." He sat down, regarding her wonderingly.

"To speak to me?" he repeated. "For the land sakes, what's happened? Is the cow dead?" "No . . . Oh, don't laugh! . . . I don't feel funny just now. Obed, do you remember that time when you asked me to marry you?" "Eh? . . . Well, say! Do you think I'd be liable to forget it? Luckiest day in my life that was. Why—" "Hush! Obed, I asked you then if—if you had a past."

"A which?" "A past. Some secret in your life you hadn't told me. You said no. Now I ask you again. Have you?" He stared at her. "Have you?" she repeated. "What?—Say! No, of course, I ain't."

"Obed—oh, don't lie to me! I couldn't ever forgive your lyin' to me." "Lie—to you? Who said I'd ever lied to you? I'll break the swab's everlasting neck!" "Hush! Sit right down again in that chair. Obed, was you ever in the Ostabate jail?"

He hesitated. Then he colored. "Why—why, yes," he admitted. "But I didn't think—" "Oh, hush! Be still! You were there and—and you never told me!" "Why—well, no, I didn't. You see, I was kind of ashamed, and—it didn't amount to nothin' much, anyhow."

"Didn't amount to anything? Oh, my soul, how can you talk so? Did you know a man there named—what was it—Dugan?" "Dugan? Yes, certain. Tough lookin' critter, regular tramp. In there for bein' drunk and smashin' windows and raisin' hob generally. Yes, I knew him. He was the only one I had to look after for one spell. We got to be kind of—well, chummy, as you might say. 'Twas lonesome bein' janitor and keeper and everything else in a place like that one-horse Ostabate jail, and a feller has to talk to somebody. The sheriff, he only come around once in a while, so—"

"Wait! Oh, wait! You were—a keeper there—in the jail?" "Sure! I suppose likely I had ought to have told you about it, Lurella; but, you see, I was kind of ashamed, same as I said. 'Twan't much of a job, but I took it 'cause mother was sick—'twas just afore she died—and the boat shop where I'd been workin' had shut down and I needed money. Then, another thing made me ashamed of it was on account of bein' fired. Politics, 'twas. Jim Leghorn, he was sheriff, and he give me my walkin' papers to make room for another Democrat, same as him. Only job I ever was discharged from, that jail job was. I'm sorry I never told you, Lurella, but . . . Eh? How did you come to know about it and—and that Dugan tramp?"

She did not answer. Instead, she hurried out into the kitchen, closing the door. The kitchen was empty, so were the plates and the teacup on the table. So was the chair where her recent visitor had been sitting. So, too, was the rack on the back of the stove where the cranberry pie had been put to keep it warm.

A moment later she entered the dining room. She leaned over her husband and put her arms about his neck. "Obed," she said, laughing and sobbing together, "I—I'm awfully sorry, but you won't have any cranberry pie this noon. I—"

Obed interrupted. "Cranberry pie?" he repeated. "Who's talkin' about cranberry pie? I want to know why you—" "Yes, yes, dear. Of course, you do. And I'm goin' to tell you. But first I want to tell you how bad I feel about that pie. I—I'll make two for supper, and you can eat them both, all of 'em, if you want to."

"The Standard by which all other makes are measured"

Care of Your Table.
The finish of a dining table may be marred if water drips on it from a plant used as a center decoration. This is avoided by placing a piece of oil-cloth corresponding in size to the centerpiece beneath the dolly.

The Bishop's Explanation.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE ITEMS

Uniontown.—Severely scored by Judge E. H. Reppert and handled as "poison pen" offenders, W. N. Likins, editor of the Watchman, a weekly publication, and E. V. Bowker, Mason-town correspondent of the newspaper, were sentenced to pay a fine of $100 each and the costs in the case, in which they were charged with criminal libel. The fine and costs amount to $365. The prosecutor in the case was J. M. Howard, one of Fayette county's best known and highly respected citizens.

Meadville.—George Ewing, colored, was held for the September grand jury for the charge of murder, as a result of Ewing shooting Prince Crawford through the heart during a quarrel at a construction camp near Meadville a week ago.

Pottsville.—A pin prick in her finger resulted in the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Updegrave, wife of Milton Updegrave, of Muir, at the Pottsville Hospital. Lockjaw ensued and efforts of physicians for a week failed in the end. Mrs. Updegrave sustained the slight injury while housecleaning and as usual in such abradions, paid little attention to the trouble until blood poisoning set in. She was 50 years of age.

Driffton.—Joseph Deitch, of Free-land, miner, and Theodore Thomaski, laborer, had a close call from instant death in the No. 10 slope of the Driffton colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal company, when the roof caved in, bringing down thousands of tons of rock and coal within a few inches of where they worked. Their tools with over $100 were buried and cannot be recovered.

Bethlehem.—At city council meeting J. A. Trimble and "Chapple" Gorman, fight promoter and produce dealer, charged that bootlegging was going on from half a dozen stalls at the City Market. The charges took council by surprise and an immediate investigation was promised.

Harrisburg.—There were 2,750,000 more pounds of domestic meats and poultry and more than 1,000,000 more pounds of butter held in storage in Pennsylvania on June 30 than on the same date in 1922, the bureau of foods announced. The greatest increase was in pork and pork products, with 1,600,000 more pounds, and in domestic poultry, with 780,000 more pounds. There were 22,438,000 dozens of eggs reported in storage, the second highest record for any June 30 period since the storage law was created, being exceeded only by the record of 1922 of more than 23,000,000 dozens. The average family, the bureau points out, consumes two dozen eggs a week, and the present storage holdings present two and a half dozens per capita for the state of 9,000,000 residents.

Harrisburg.—Appointments to boards of trustees announced were: Hazleton State Hospital, John Shigo, Free-land; Pennsylvania Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, Erie, State Senator Marshall L. Phipps, Franklin.

Altoona.—Negroes to the number of 525 have been brought to the middle division of the Pennsylvania railroad from the south within the past month and are finding employment in the shops at Altoona and along the line. They are housed in comfortable camps, six of which are maintained by the company.

Pittsburgh.—Robert T. Houldon, who as master, heard the testimony in the divorce action of Herman Karples against his wife, Edna, recommended to the court that the divorce be granted. There never had been any serious differences in the family, the master reported, but when Karples found in 1921 that his business compelled his residence in Pittsburgh, his wife refused to leave New York, and he filed petition. They were married 17 years ago.

Harrisburg.—Activities of the state police for the past two weeks in their prohibition enforcement campaign resulted in the arrest of 193 persons. Seizures included 19 stills, 13 trucks, six automobiles, six barrels and 4454 quarts of whiskey, 7868 gallons of mash, 936 gallons of moonshine, 565 gallons of alcohol, 42 gallons of cider, 178 gallons of wine, 164 bottles of Jamaica ginger, 1600 pounds of sugar and 244 barrels, 536 cases and 851 bottles of beer.

Wilkes-Barre.—General Asher Miner commander of the 109th field artillery in the world war, announced his retirement from the military service, going into private life with the rank of major general, which he earned in the Pennsylvania national guard. General Miner recently returned from a tour of the world. He lost a leg in the battle of Apremont in the world war.

Pittsburgh.—Mack Bullock, a negro, of Lumberton, N. C., died here, the third victim of a steel mill accident.

Harrisburg.—Governor Pinchot issued rescripts staying the electrocution of Marcantonio Daniels and Angelo Gragassa, Washington county, from the week beginning July 30 to the week beginning October 1.

West Hazleton.—This borough has organized a Good Government League to secure annexation to Hazleton.

Nanticoke.—Six men were seriously burned in a gas explosion in the Avondale mine of the Glen Alden Coal company.

Williamsport.—Yermon Hill, 26, was electrocuted in his home here while taking a bath, as he stood in the tub and grasped an overhead light fixture.

Free-land.—Tax collectors of this borough and Foster township have issued more than 100 warrants for the arrest of women voters, charged with failing to pay their taxes.

Pittsburgh.—City detectives raided an underground opium den in the Second avenue district, confiscating three opium layouts and narcotics valued at $1000 and arrested Yee Fung, the alleged proprietor. A number of Chinese, who were in the place when the officers entered, escaped by a tunnel.

Thirty-five barrels of what prohibition agents described as "good beer" were captured at the Keystone Brewery, in Millvale. Three men conveying it on truck were held pending a hearing before a federal commissioner.

Harrisburg.—Heads of state departments have been ordered to prepare monthly budget data for the use of the administration, and have been instructed to apportion their appropriation expenditures on the basis of 45 per cent for this year and 55 per cent for next year. It is understood that this is done because the 45 per cent allotment will necessitate a curtailment of employees this year under reorganization and will permit new additions to the salary roll of the state government next year.

Altoona.—Through the Citizens' Safety Council violators of the traffic laws in Altoona have been checked up, and it has been found that two-thirds of the infractions have been committed by motorists who do not live in the city.

Easton.—Charles Smith, who recently was discharged from the Eastern Penitentiary, in the presence of a large crowd afraid to stop him, broke the window of a pawn shop, in the business district with a big piece of coal and stole several watches. Later he was arrested at his home, where police found him asleep in bed, and committed to the Northampton county jail to await a hearing.

Harrisburg.—The appointment of Professor Charles H. Hadley as director of the bureau of plant industry, department of agriculture, was announced by Frank P. Willets, secretary of agriculture. The appointment is effective immediately. Professor Hadley succeeds Dr. J. G. Sanders, who was dropped as head of the bureau. He has been in complete charge of federal field work in the Japanese beetle area in Pennsylvania and New Jersey and will continue to devote part time to the federal work.

Harrisburg.—The Lake Erie and Ohio river canal board, Pennsylvania State Park and harbor commission of Erie, Washington Crossing Park commission and the Valley Forge Park commission may not elect secretaries who are not members of the boards or commissions. William A. Schander, special deputy attorney general, held in an opinion to Major Robert Y. Sturat, secretary of forests and waters, announced. The opinion held that under the administration reorganization code, the boards and commissions which are empowered to select secretaries other than members, are specifically mentioned.

Harrisburg.—The state department of fisheries has issued more than 23,000 permits for use of outlines and spears or gigs since January 1.

Shamokin.—The fifth death from the gas explosion at Richards Colliery, June 26, occurred when George Oswald, aged 30, died at the State Hospital here.

Hazleton.—Ralph Novak and Andrew Wassonitz, miners, of Free-land, and Michael Dinroth, a mule driver of this place, were badly burned by an explosion of gas in the No. 4 operation of the Jeddo Highland Coal company.

Rheems.—Enos F. Lloyd of this place, in charge of the bottling department of the Landis Sanitary Milk Farm, tripped on a bottle and broke a number of ribs.

West Hazleton.—Council has authorized putting before the voters a $25,000 bond issue proposition for a new fire alarm system and to motorize the fire department.

Sunbury.—The Susquehanna is so low here that it is only four feet above the water company's intake main.

Hauto.—John Oslak, of this place, was taken to the Coaldale Hospital in a serious condition from burns sustained when a kerosene lamp exploded.

Tamaqua.—Her clothing becoming ignited while she was playing with matches, Mary Koch, aged 8, was saved from death by her father, William Koch, who threw a rug about her.

Pittsburgh.—Miss Grace Cain died in a Sewickley hospital from injuries received when her fiancé's automobile was wrecked near Imperial. Charles Gittson, engaged to marry Miss Cain, was not injured. The machine was wrecked when Gittson swerved from the road to avoid striking a cow.

Pottsville.—The next six-county firemen's convention will be held here.

Port Carbon.—The north branch of the Schuylkill river, above this place, is the lowest in history, due to the long drought.

Harrisburg.—Appointment of Guy C. Brosius, of Rauchtown, as superintendent of schools of Clinton county, was announced by State Superintendent Becht.

Kingston.—The West Penn electric and Railways company will erect a new power plant near here at a cost of about $700,000.

Williamsport.—Hundreds of fish were found along the river bank at points west of here, due to some strong poison in the water.

Uniontown.—Kitchen help is so scarce here that bonuses are being paid.

FARM LIVE STOCK

Prosperity of Farming Depends on Live Stock

Live stock provides an outlet for three-fifths of the crop acreage in the United States, besides 65,000,000 acres of improved pasture, 150,000,000 acres of unimproved grass land pasture, 175,000,000 acres of woodland pasture, and 500,000,000 acres of grazing land in the arid and semi-arid sections of the West, according to C. W. McCampbell, head of the department of animal husbandry at Kansas State Agricultural college. All told, live stock furnished an outlet for 80 per cent of the total food and feed produced by tame and wild vegetation in the United States.

Live stock, by utilizing advantageously and efficiently the various pasture and forage crops, makes possible a system of crop rotation that aids materially in maintaining soil fertility and controlling plant diseases, insects and weeds.

Live stock provides, in the form of manure, the most reliable and practical fertilizer that can be used to maintain soil fertility. The production of grain takes from the soil large amounts of phosphorus, potash and nitrogen. When grain is sold off the farm where produced these elements of fertility are completely lost, but when grain is fed to live stock 80 per cent of the phosphorus, potash and nitrogen is returned to the soil in the form of manure. Manure also adds to the soil that necessary constituent humus which commercial fertilizers do not.

Salt, Lime and Iodine

Needed in Stock Rations

"Salt, iodine and calcium are needed in every well-balanced live stock ration," declared E. B. Hart of the agricultural chemistry department, University of Wisconsin.

"Salt is an essential factor in a well-balanced ration," declared Mr. Hart. When used it is usually in the form of ordinary salt or sodium chloride. The chlorine upon entering the stomach forms hydrochloric acid, and this acid is necessary for proper and complete digestion. The animal with a roughened coat is one which is not receiving proper nutrition, and this improper nutrition may sometimes be traced to a lack of salt in the ration.

"Nearly all common foodstuffs are very low in iodine content," said Mr. Hart. "The greatest loss resulting from a deficiency of iodine is in the birth of hairless pigs. The colder region of this country is in the Northwest and it is in this section that high losses are incurred. The fact that it has not put in an appearance on your farm does not necessarily mean that it never will. And a little iodine in the form of sodium or potassium iodide will serve as an insurance against trouble of this type."

"Calcium is being given off constantly in the form of salts in the milk of a dairy cow, and some provision must be made to replace this. It has been found that alfalfa hay cured under caps carries a vitamin which aids in calcium assimilation. Lime or bone-meal added to the roughage will also help to overcome the constant drain on the calcium supply of the body."

Combinations Outlined for Production of Pork

"Why fatten hogs with corn and wheat when each of the following combinations will produce 100 pounds of pork?" is the pertinent question when reading over the following feeding summary made by Professor Fjeldsted of the Oregon Agricultural college:

1. 470 pounds barley, ground.
2. 400 pounds barley, ground, plus 20 pounds digester tankage.
3. 332 pounds barley, ground, plus 350 pounds skim milk or buttermilk.
4. 246 pounds barley, ground, plus 123 pounds middlings, plus 220 pounds buttermilk or skim milk.
5. 236 pounds barley, ground, plus 118 pounds middlings, plus 511 pounds garbage.
6. 320 pounds barley, ground, plus 160 pounds middlings.
7. 252 pounds barley, ground, plus 126 pounds middlings, plus 30 pounds digester tankage.
8. 209 pounds barley, ground, plus 209 pounds middlings, plus 20 pounds digester tankage.

Good Feeds for Growing Pigs or the Brood Sow

A mixture of 60 per cent barley and 40 per cent oats will be a good mixture for growing pigs or brood sows. This mixture would be improved upon by making it 40 per cent barley, 30 per cent oats, 20 per cent middlings, and 10 per cent tankage. For fattening pigs a ration of 90 per cent barley and 10 per cent tankage or 60 per cent barley, 30 per cent middlings, and 10 per cent tankage will be found satisfactory.

Growth and Development of Pigs Must Be Rapid

The pigs should be fed grain and finished as early as possible if the pork is to be economically produced. Growth and development of pigs should be rapid if the bacon is to be profitable. A little neglect at this critical season may retard the growth of pigs. When the pigs are to be finished they may be confined in pens unless there is a luxuriant pasture whence plenty of grain may be fed.

REDHEAD

By HILDA LOENSON

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

HARRY CREWE, or "Brother," as most of the villagers knew him, was sweet-tempered and, oh, so youthful. His red hair, instead of causing megriment, resulted in tolerant admiration because he never allowed himself to become angry when teased about his curly, soft, red mass of hair.

"Brother," said his older sister, with an amused air, "I'd like to tell you that your hair is just the color of a newly-ripening tomato—if I thought it would affect you in the least. But it's no fun teasing you—you're too tame!"

Brother, just turned twenty, blushed, started to retort, thought better of it, and removed himself from his sister's presence.

Bethlia Maxham, Lippit's only really beautiful girl, was "coming out" the same year that Brother's hair was turning that ripe tomato shade of red. Her first party was scheduled for the balmy month of May, while her first evening dress was to be a vision of the delicate color of the Mayflower, combined with the choicest selection of silver lace.

Brother gazed at Bethlia with worshipping eyes as she led the way into the parlor. He was the last arrival.

He danced, absent-mindedly, with several of the slightly pretty girls who deigned to become his partner. However, his eyes ever roved around to discover the exact location of his hostess.

Finally he became desperate and, approaching Bethlia, asked huskily: "Bethlia, may—may I have this dance?"

Bethlia thought—then very apologetically, "I'm so sorry. I have the best ones taken. Later in the evening I will be free."

Brother sighed and asked some one named Ruth to pick up his discarded offer. In the midst of their dancing Ruth giggled. "You're a funny boy, Red-head!"

"Ehuh?" Brother miscalculated his distance and tripped over his fair partner's slipper.

"It made me laugh awful hard," continued Ruth. "There was Beth wearing a pink dress and you with your flaming hair come and ask her to dance. Didn't you know Beth has such fine senses that that wouldn't do at all? Anyway, she told me she doesn't like red hair!"

Brother stopped short. "Is that true?"

Ruth nodded her head seriously. "Don't tell—" but her partner had deserted her in the middle of the floor to disappear into the poolroom, where his face scorched and burned unheeded.

Ruth, angered, followed him to his fair. "What do you mean by leaving me?" she began, assuming the attitude of an attacking tigress.

"Shut up!" shouted Brother, impatiently, as he picked up a cue and aimed it threateningly at her.

Ruth retreated hastily. A little later Bethlia, coming in in search of her father, discovered Brother flung across the pool table, his form motionless.

"Brother! Harry!" There was intense feeling in her voice as she shook him roughly.

Brother raised his head. "Leave me alone," he muttered thickly. "Leave me alone before your dress catches fire and destroys your fine senses—get out!"

"Harry!" exclaimed Bethlia, hurt—her pretty face working convulsively. "Don't you feel well?"

Brother shook her slender white hands from his shoulders as he burst out: "Can't you leave me alone? You'll get burnt! You'll get burnt! Bah!" All his feelings were given vent in that one word, "bah!" after which he flung himself from the room and the house.

The next morning Mary carried up an envelope, sweetly scented with Mayflower, before Brother had got out of bed. She smiled slyly. "Can't guess who brought this?"

To her acute astonishment, Brother snatched the envelope from her hand and growled, "Get out!" Mary went, stricken dumb.

"Dear Harry" (read the message). "I was puzzled over your behavior last night until Ruth told me about the joke she played on you. Believe me, Harry, I was hurt because you left without giving me one dance. Please consider this an apology for my seeming coolness."

Bethlia.

Half an hour later Brother had burst into the Maxham residence. A few minutes later he was in the parlor, on the couch, beside Bethlia.

His eyes were eloquent.

"You didn't think that about my hair?"

"No," answered Bethlia, quietly.

"You meant every word you wrote in that letter?"

"Yes." Her voice was not quite so steady.

Suddenly, perhaps at the poignancy of that single word, Brother's boldness left him. Ruddy color flooded his cheeks, his neck, his forehead. He reached for his hat, her hand; squeezed both convulsively and then ran for the door.

"Are you going so soon?" asked Bethlia, disappointment in her tone.

"Yes—er—see you tonight! Good-by!"

PLANES ARE BEING FOR AIR DEFENSE

WAR COLLEGE UMPIRES DECIDE
THEY ARE NECESSARY TO MEET HOSTILE AIRCRAFT.

DEVELOPING LAND DEFENSES

Four New Types of Anti-Aircraft Guns
Are Being Developed, One of Which
Fires 45-Pound Shell to 45,000 Feet
Altitude

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—Recent playing of the war game at the army war college has brought out emphatically the fact that airplanes are the chief defense against all hostile aircraft.

War college umpires, after careful consideration of all elements in the war game, were compelled to award victory to the enemy air fleet because of the lack of fighting planes to protect the defending bombing squadrons. It was held that the bombers would certainly have been brought down or driven off by the enemy combat planes and the umpires ruled that the enemy landing had been accomplished.

This result conformed with the expectations of army officers who have studied out the probabilities of future naval and land engagements. The war game, however, was not of a nature to serve as any test of the various types of land defenses against aircraft developed since the war to supplement fighting air squadrons in protection of cities or camps against hostile bombers.

New Anti-Aircraft Guns.

A recent War department memorandum described four new types of anti-aircraft guns now in progress of development and also a new searchlight of enormous power to be used for the same purpose.

The first of the new guns is the 50-caliber machine gun with a horizontal range of about 27,000 feet and a straightup range of 9,000 to 12,000 feet and a rate of fire of about 500 shots a minute. Fire control is maintained with this gun through new tracer ammunition, visible night or day up to 2,500 yards.

The 50-caliber gun is under manufacture for issue as a substitute for the 30-caliber weapon now used, which is a relic of war days.

The second gun under development is a 37-mm. machine gun, firing high explosive shells with fuses so delicately adjusted that the shells, while safe to handle before firing, explode on contact with balloon fabric once they have been discharged from the gun.

A rate of fire of 100 to 120 shots a minute is expected with this weapon, which will have a range of 21,000 feet and tracer ammunition visible up to 15,000 feet, making possible accurate firing up to that point.

It is planned to install these weapons in batteries of four operating with a single telescopic sight control and to be trained and fired by a single gunner. The result will be a secondary barrage zone to keep hostile craft above the 20,000 level and the "37s" will be a highly mobile equipment fast in getting into action.

Fires Shell 21,000 Feet Up.

The third new gun in the group is a three-inch weapon on a mobile mount with a rate of fire of fifteen shots a minute, effective at altitudes up to 21,000 feet, and with full 360 degree traverse to enable the gunner to follow his target in any direction. It can be fired at an elevation of 30 degrees and has a horizontal range of more than 38,000 feet with projectiles weighing fifteen pounds and containing a heavy bursting charge. Guns and mounts of this type are now under test at army proving grounds.

Gun No. 4 in the anti-aircraft list is the 4.7 inch, firing a 45-pound shell to an effective altitude of 45,000 feet. Its horizontal range is 27,000 yards. It is to be mounted on a mobile carriage with full traverse and equipped for power loading and with an automatic breech block to speed up firing. This gun also can be fired at an elevation of 30 degrees, or within 10 degrees of straight over the gunner's head.

As a supplement to these new weapons, the experts are working out a system of indirect aiming for all of them, experiments having shown that central station control firing is greatly superior to the old wartime systems. Two types of central stations are under development, either of which will obviate the necessity for altimeter stations and base line readings and materially speed up aiming and firing, although requiring less personnel in operation than the old control methods.

Around World Flight.

It is quite likely that within a year several American army airplanes will have started on a flight around the world. Secretary of War Weeks has authorized the army air service to make investigations to obtain information as to meteorological conditions, landing facilities, harbor situations, anchorage, transportation, airways, etc., over the Atlantic and Pacific oceans this summer in connection with a final estimate of the practicability and cost of making the flight and the service is going ahead with the project.

Lieuts. Clarence E. Crumrine and Clifford C. Nutt will make preliminary surveys. Moreover, the chief of the air service has appointed five officers of his service to investigate and report upon the project in all of its phases.

Lieutenant Crumrine, who was a member of the successful airplane expedition to Alaska and return in 1922 will survey Greenland, Iceland, the Faroe islands, British Isles, France and Italy as soon as the necessary diplomatic arrangements can be completed. At the same time Lieutenant Nutt, who also was a member of the Alaskan expedition, will proceed through Japan and the Kurall islands to the Aleutian islands and Alaska to investigate the facilities for flight over those areas.

The committee of five members will make a final report after completion of the investigations by Lieutenants Crumrine and Nutt, and it will include recommendations as to type of planes, the personnel, the route to be followed, the general organization of the flight, and the necessary advance parties that must distribute supplies and equipment prior to the event.

Work for Special Committee

This special committee is headed by Capt. William F. Volandt, who will furnish information in regard to transportation and finance. The other members are Lieuts. St. Clair Street, Robert J. Brown, Erik H. Nelson and Crumrine. Lieutenants Street and Brown will conduct the necessary liaison with other services for information relative to meteorological conditions, investigate the location of landing fields in relation to the best season for the making of the flight, and study the organization of the flight based on the experience gained in the Alaskan and Porto Rican flights and report on the distribution and allocation of supplies. Lieutenants Nelson and Crumrine will consider equipment and make recommendations as to the type of plane to be used. This part of the problem will include a survey and comparison of all types of air planes available in this country for long-distance flights.

It is believed that not more than six or less than three planes will be assigned to make the flight, which probably will proceed from the west coast, possibly Seattle, cross the United States in the general direction of prevailing winds, and thence proceed by way of Newfoundland, Greenland, Iceland, British Isles, France, Italy, Asia Minor, India, China, Japan, Kurile islands, Alaska, down the west coast of Canada and back to Seattle.

As to the cost, it is estimated that, by making maximum hops of from 1,000 to 1,500 miles, the flight can be accomplished well within $100,000, an amount that in all probability would not require a special appropriation by congress.

Commander for the ZR-3.

Capt. George W. Steele has been named as the commander of the dirigible being constructed at the Zeppelin plant in Germany, when and if the ship arrives in the United States. He will watch the final work on the ship and accompany the German crew on the trans-Atlantic trip to Lakehurst, N. J., this fall.

The ZR-3 is somewhat smaller than the ill-fated ZR-2, the British-built airship which fell in the Humber on its trial trip.

The ship was contracted for at the council of ambassadors, and can be used only for commercial purposes. It will not become American property until it is landed in America.

The ZR-3 will be the largest dirigible in the world, having a length of 660 feet, a maximum width of 92 feet and a height of 100 feet. It will have a capacity of 2,400,000 cubic feet. Its length will be slightly exceeded by that of the ZR-1, which will be 680 feet long, but the other dimensions of the latter ship will be smaller. The width of the ZR-1 will be 79 feet, its height 90 feet and its capacity 2,115,000 cubic feet. The capacity of the ZR-2, the giant of them all, was 2,724,000 cubic feet. The cost of the ZR-3 is estimated at $2,000,000.

May Change Government.

Japanese-made candles were the cause of a small riot at Monaco. A hundred Roman candles were found to bear the trade-mark of Nippon, and Italians believe that it will result in the principality of Monaco being returned to Italy. Monaco has 1,017 voting citizens, most of whom are naturalized Italians. When the prince of Monaco wanted fireworks to celebrate the recent baptism of his grandson he ordered Tokyo's finest instead of the real Roman product. As a result the Italian element has joined the Fascist movement en masse and has sworn to have revenge even if they must declare Monaco a republic. Threats often have been heard before, but the Monaco Fascist this time seem determined to shake up the principality with the severest Mussolini methods.

What Held Him.

The lovers had been sitting out on the porch until late in the evening. The chill of the night had forced them to seek warmer quarters. They went directly to the parlor. Not knowing it, the young man sat upon a freshly varnished chair. When he announced his intentions of going home, a troubled look crept over his face.

"Ah, dear," whispered the girl, "you can't tear yourself away from me?"

Luminous Boots.

Now we have luminous-faced watches to tell us the time in the dark and luminous tipped electric light switches to help us to find them. The latest idea is to have boots armed with little searchlights in the toes to show up a dark pathway and save the bother of carrying a light.

There is so little rest! There is such an unreasoning passion for activity. And so we skim the surface of all things; we never look down into their depths and see the power of help and culture which they might contain.—Philips Brooks.

FEEDING THE FAMILY

Why is it that the housewives who have families of children who need nourishing, body-building food are purposely indifferent or willfully ignorant? They will neither read nor ask advice about the proper feeding of a growing family, but eat just what appeals to the eye in the market, regardless of cost or nutritive value. The woman who feeds her family on four or five cucumbers at a cost of a dollar and a quarter at this season is giving them something they may like, but is absolutely without nourishment, unless served with a rich sauce. One quarter of the money put into a good piece of soup meat and cooked with vegetables would make a fine meal for six or eight.

The pity of it is these women who need it most are the hardest to approach in teaching food values.

Don't buy foods that have few calories, for it is calories we need to keep us mentally and physically strong. A calorie means a certain amount of energy. We eat a potato of 100-calorie value and it becomes a part of us, is burned up in the body and produces a certain amount of energy. Each person needs a certain amount; for some it may be 2,500 a day; others need 3,000. One can always judge the food value of any product by the number of calories it contains; that is, how much energy will it give you when eaten. Lettuce, a lovely head, or a beautiful green cucumber may be big and strong-looking, but has no nourishment; however, lettuce is valuable as it is rich in vitamins and should be served frequently because of them.

Buying foods out of season unless for a dainty for an invalid, is very extravagant. It takes will power to pass by the tempting things in the market that look so attractive, but if we are wise we will buy the food that will furnish the most energy for the money.

FAUNCES TAVERN

Built in 1719 as a residence for a Mr. DeLancey, fate decreed that it should play a prominent part on so many important occasions that it has naturally won for itself a place of prominence among the most distinguished landmarks of our time.

History records that in 1757 this building was being used as a store-room and warehouse. Later it became the property of a West Indian gentleman who was known as "Black Sam," from whom Samuel Faunces purchased it in 1762. Three years later it passed to a new owner and in 1768 the organization of the Chamber of Commerce was effected here. Faunces again became the owner of this much-traded building in 1770 and in it conducted a tavern—a gathering place for those gentlemen and ladies who wished to favor him with their company.

A shot from a man-of-war struck this building in 1775, following which Faunces joined the American army. Later he again secured ownership of this hotel and continued in possession of it for a number of years.

In 1783 General George Washington was banqueted here by Governor Clinton of New York state, and in this same building during the same year General Washington took his leave of his forty-four officers.

Faunces sold this building in 1785 and it later passed through a series of ownerships and usages. In 1832 the interior was damaged by fire. Twenty years later it became known as the Broad Street House. Subsequently it was visited by a disastrous fire and still later two stories were added to it.

The venerable building was once more restored and in 1907 it was dedicated by the Sons of the Revolution. Restored to its former appearance and interior arrangement, the present structure is practically as it was during the Revolutionary period. The first floor is still used as a restaurant, the second containing the celebrated long room where General Washington took leave of his faithful lieutenants of Revolutionary fame and the third being occupied as a museum contains relics—flags, china, medals, etc., of Revolutionary days.
